Final Reflection

It was a rough class, I expected something difficult but not that difficult, I liked the first 2 midterm, they were challenging but I felt like I was doing something, we firstly look at the front end, and even though I didn't like it I was good at it.

I must recognize that all the extra material is great, when it's not something mandatory, when I liked the topic of the class I enjoyed going through all the material, exploring those webs that showed what could be done to make our web pages feel and look better.

With the second midterm I like the class the most, I liked a lot looking on how everything works on the backend, I made the pokedex and I loved it. I think that the freedom that is given to us is great, we can use any tool we want, we can search for more info online and we can get help from ai.

The downside it's that is something necessary, without that help it would be impossible to pass the class, at the beginning of the semester you said that we needed to give more hours to the class than the ones of the classroom and I hated that, it feels overwhelming to balance other 7 classes, living by myself and working for scholarship.

I think that it would be better if the class was more relaxed, its better to learn something than to push every topic inside our brains, there are too many topics that need to be addressed in too little time. The idea of the midterm exams its great, making time one part of the exam feels like a real job and it's great that we had them all on weekend when we could work easily on it, and we applied what we learned during the midterm.

One thing that I didn't like was the project, I felt like its better to split in smaller projects than to make something that big, we had a lot of time to do it, I'm not going to lie, but trying to put everything together made it so we were more concerned of it to pass the requirements than to apply what we learned on the midterm.

It was a good class, I learned a lot but also gave me the most headaches of all the subjects, I think that it's not necessary to make it so demanding, I appreciate the effort that you gave to us, we could ask you questions at any time, and you were available to help us when we were struggling. When we were in class and we asked you something until we understood, you explained everything using more simple terms till we had it all together. Thank you.
